TILT Holdings Announces Cannabis Inclusion Program

Helping support license holders across the country, TILT offers financial and operational assistance to promote industry inclusivity amongst minorities, veterans and more

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- TILT Holdings Inc. ("TILT" or the "Company") (CSE: TILT) (OTC: SVVTF), a global technology and infrastructure company engaged in research, development, manufacturing and sale of a broad range of products for the cannabis industry, announced today the official launch of its Cannabis Inclusion Program ("Program") empowering and supporting license holders in legalized cannabis markets. This program is designed to help support those individuals that have been disproportionately punished by cannabis laws in the past, including the Controlled Substances Act.

Helping communities move beyond socially-constructed barriers and historical stigmas, the TILT Cannabis Inclusion Program supports cannabis license holders, regardless of age, culture, ethnicity, gender identity, sexual orientation, physical ability, race, religion, size, or socioeconomic status. The Program provides various levels of support across the needs of the business including application development, cultivation infrastructure, software and services, talent management, and capital investment.

"We know it can be challenging to secure the capital, infrastructure, product, technology, and talent to effectively scale in the cannabis industry," said Alex Coleman, Chief Executive Officer of TILT Holdings. "Our goal is to remove those barriers to entry, and help these individuals navigate the complex cannabis regulations by providing them the support to successfully get up and running in half the time at a fraction of the cost."

TILT has been running a test program in its home state of Massachusetts, where several original not-for-profit license holders contracted with TILT. With the state's expansion of cannabis laws now including adult use, licenses can be retail only, and the expansion of TILT's Cannabis Inclusion Program has already generated over 25 additional applicants from Massachusetts and additional states over the past several months.

One of the approved program applicants is Seun Adedeji, a 24-year-old Nigerian immigrant who is the youngest African-American dispensary owner in Massachusetts. Adedeji came to the United States on a wrestling scholarship and opened up his first dispensary, Elev8 Cannabis, in Oregon at the age of 23. Since then, Adedeji's dispensary has been focused on changing the narrative of the cannabis industry by embracing his company's mission statement of "treating everyone like gold."

“TILT is the only institution I’ve encountered that is eager to lend capital to minorities. TILT provides a solution for under-capitalized license holders to become successful business owners well beyond the money they extend,” said Adedeji. “Through the implementation of technology, tools, and resources, guided by people with great track records, TILT provides a roadmap for success that otherwise wouldn’t be available.”

Another member of TILT’s Program is Tito Jackson, former Boston City Council member, mayoral candidate and owner of Verdant Medical. In addition to participating in TILT’s Cannabis Inclusion Program, Jackson is also helping TILT identify other applicants across MA who can benefit from the Program.

“It’s important that the cannabis ownership landscape is a reflection of the state’s diverse population, and it’s great that TILT is deliberate in their inclusion efforts to ensure that groups that have historically been excluded are proactively included in ownership and operation,” Jackson said. “I am excited for Verdant to participate in the Program and I am looking forward to working with TILT to identify others who can benefit from this opportunity to be set up and supported for success.”
